

Politicians of Principle

Rosario López, University of Málaga

This paper examines how a number of professional politicians and intellectuals described themselves and/or other fellow members of parliament by elaborating on the role that principles play in politics. In other words, the focus lies on the concepts and rhetorical strategies employed by historical agents to picture themselves and others as doing politics in certain ways, and therefore possessing different qualities as politicians.